

Fraport customers enjoy "1001 Nights" party

Location: Frankfurt Airport, Sheraton Hotel & Towers, Congress Center. Date: Monday evening on November 19, 2007. The hall is full to bursting. Guests are constantly filling their plates at the opulent Arabian buffet. The dance floor is filling up. Belly dancers are writhing to oriental music. There is an international babble of voices at every table. What on earth was going on?

The answer is quite simple: Fraport Ground Services had sent out invitations to its already traditional "Ground Handling Night" and more than 900 customers and business partners joined in the "1001 Oriental Nights" extravaganza. The guests thoroughly enjoyed Arabian delicacies such as mezze, tajin menina, hummus, tabbouleh, couscous and baklava. Old contacts were renewed and new contacts made. In the midst of all this, guests listened to the fantastic music provided by the now almost legendary band

"The Hollywood Connection" or let themselves get carried away enough to dance once or even a few times. Or they just had a chat over a glass of wine.

It was astonishing how quickly things quietened down whenever the charming belly dancer Djamila came on stage, captivating and wowing guests with her masterly oriental dance show. And it was also amazing how many plucky guests agreed to take part in a spontaneous lesson in oriental dancing. It was not long before they were on stage moving their bodies in time with the Arabian music. And late in the evening Djamila's dynamic duo performance with her female partner Nashyra brought the evening to a rousing finale. The prolonged applause showed the show had been completely to the audience's taste. Most guests continued dancing until well after midnight and afterwards the 1001st oriental night also drew slowly to a close.
